Animal Rescue League of Boston (ARL) Removes Nearly 50 Cats from Hoarding Situation

Animal abuse is cruel - but it is not always intentional - It can be a sign or product of Human illness

ARL's Law Enforcement Department is committed to preventing animal cruelty, neglect and suffering in Massachusetts. This is achieved in numerous forms: from citations and filing animal cruelty charges, to working with, and educating pet owners. The latter played a large role in a recent hoarding incident.

ARL Law Enforcement recently removed 46 cats and kittens from a Bristol County property, which are now in the care of ARL. DUE TO THE SENSITIVE NATURE OF THE CASE, ARL WILL NOT BE RELEASING THE LOCATION OR NAMES OF THE PARTIES INVOLVED.

The cats and kittens were taken to ARL's Boston Animal Care and Adoption Center and are receiving ongoing veterinary care for a variety of medical issues, including zoonotic disease.

Animal hoarding situations are delicate, and ARL's law enforcement officers recognize that compassion must be given to both the animal and human players involved.

"Any time we have a hoarding case, we are cognizant to both the animal condition and the owner awareness," said Darleen Wood, ARL's Associate Director of Law Enforcement. "As much as we consider the mental and emotional state of each animal, we duplicate this concern for the animal owner. We do not approach any of these cases with judgement or insolence and each case is unique and each animal owner requires individualistic services which could include elderly, veterans or addiction services."

Animal Hoarding Explained

Animal hoarding is a serious, yet under-recognized community issue in Massachusetts that is responsible for extensive animal suffering. It can often be associated with adult self-neglect and/or mental illness, and animal hoarding can also put children, the elderly, dependent adults, property, and public health at risk. Unfortunately, the hoarding situations that ARL encounters are becoming more frequent, and increasingly complex.

Animal hoarders typically fall into one of the three following groups:

1. Overwhelmed caregivers are often well-intentioned in their behavior and experience a steady decline in animal caretaking ability due to changes in financial or medical circumstances.
2. Rescue hoarders are those who acquire animals due to their strong sense of mission to save animals from death or other circumstance and will not seek the assistance of animal welfare agencies or authorities.
3. Exploiter hoarders acquire animals to serve their own needs and lack guilt and remorse for the harm that their actions may cause animals or other humans.

The four main characteristics of animal hoarding are:

1. Failure to provide minimal standards of sanitation, space, nutrition, and veterinary care for animals.
2. Inability to recognize the effects of this failure on the welfare of the animals, humans in the household, and environment.
3. Obsessive attempts to accumulate/maintain a collection of animals in the face of progressively deteriorating conditions.
4. Denial or minimization of problems and living conditions for people and animals.

ABOUT THE ANIMAL RESCUE LEAGUE OF BOSTON:

The Animal Rescue League of Boston (ARL) is an unwavering champion for animals in need, committed to keeping them safe and healthy in habitats and homes. Founded in 1899, ARL provides high quality veterinary care, adoption, and rescue services; while also confronting the root causes of animal cruelty and neglect through innovative community programs, police investigations, and public advocacy. In 2016, ARL served more than 17,800 animals throughout Massachusetts. ARL is a non-profit 501(c)3 organization. We receive no government funding and rely solely on the generosity of individuals to support programs and services that help animals in need.
