Special Home Needed for Special Needs Dog “Twooey” suffers from possible neurological disorder

Twooey, a one-and-a-half-year-old hound mix, came to the Animal Rescue League of Boston (ARL) recently by way of a local animal control officer after she was surrendered. She is a wonderful dog but will need a special family to take her in.

When she came to ARL Twooey had tremendous difficulty walking and following a veterinary exam and x-ray imaging, ARL’s shelter medicine staff surmised that she may be suffering from neurological deficiencies. X-rays showed fusion of the vertebrae along her spine, which may be contributing with her issues.

Twooey will likely need further diagnostic testing, including a possible MRI, and a consult with a neurologist once she finds her new home.

Since being at ARL, she has received constant exercise and has shown improved mobility as her legs grow stronger.
