The Animal Rescue League of Boston (ARL) invites members of the media to take part in this special moment between the brave cat and owner, who traveled from her home in Florida to reclaim the four-year-old cat.

Per Massport, Rowdy escaped her kitty kennel upon her Lufthansa flight's arrival on June 24 and had been roaming the airport ever since. Searching for Rowdy became a community effort, with everyone from construction workers to airline staff constantly on the lookout and hoping for a positive outcome. Massport staff set up wildlife cameras around Terminal E in areas she had been seen, as well as safe release animal traps.

On Wednesday, July 13, Rowdy finally allowed herself to be caught.

Shortly after Rowdy went missing, ARL offered assistance to Massport, and also loaned humane cat traps. Once the wayward cat was trapped, ARL transported the cat to its Boston Animal Care and Adoption Center. Rowdy was examined by ARL's veterinary staff and was found to be in excellent health, and from there she settled into her temporary accommodations quickly and for the past couple of days has been relaxing, eating, sleeping, and interacting with staff and volunteers.
